Being a girl is...

The inborn nature of the girl as I see it is to get married, to do the family chores, to manage the activities of the household, to maintain the integrity, gentleness and calmness, to keep the traditionally dignified long hair and to care for the personal hygiene.

Some challenges faced as a girl are ...

Forbidden by the parents to serve in the military service, not to receive the equal rights with male friends, women are not allowed in the position of authority, not allow to do travel alone, considered as a second class citizen, fragile and delicate, forbidden to enter some holy places of Pagoda, discriminated in job application, bullied by their drug addicted husbands.

How to be a girl for a girl...

Be helpful to the companions whether they are younger or older women.. To report to the authorities whenever someone is being abused and to do prevention so that they may not be trafficked, raped, violated.

The reasons I love myself is...

I am proud of myself being a girl because of our national figure, hero Daw Aung San Su Kyi, to make myself beautiful with cosmetics, an opportunity to receive the individual care and protection from the society, ability to generate children, and also having a chance to become a miss universe.

How to be a successful woman...

Since childhood she must be in the atmosphere of parental guidance, to be hardworking in study and education, to be holistic and outstanding in health, sport and education so that the girls can keep abreast of other girls in developed countries. Furthermore, to have self-confidence, strong religious devotion and respect to the parents, teachers and elder people are the key players for the girls to be a successful woman.
